Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after allowance or after an Office action under Ex Parte Quayle, 25 USPQ 74, 453 O.G. 213 (Comm'r Pat. 1935). Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, prosecution in this application has been reopened pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on July 13, 2007 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yoon (5,954,731) in view of the teaching of Hassler (5,374,277).

Yoon discloses a surgical instrument comprising a handle (68,72) linked to a proximal end portion of a tubular shaft (10). The shaft has a distal end linked to one or more instrument heads (18a,18b) so as to allow the instrument head to bend relative to the tube shaft (see Figures 7-8). The head includes rotatably supported end effectors having a pivotable engaging element (112a, 112b), and the handle has a plurality of manipulators (20b, 20a and handle 68,72). The handle is pivotally supported at the tube shaft via a pivot shaft (84, etc.) that allows the handle to be pivoted (shown in

The only feature not expressly taught by Yoon is a manipulator comprising a rotary knob being rotatably supported on the handle member.

Hassler discloses an analogous grasping device including a handle device connected to a tubular shaft, and specifically disclose rotary knobs (260, 270, 290) connected to the handle assembly to allow for rotation and angular orientation of the operating member located at the distal end of the shaft. The gear train used to control the orientation of the instrument head is fully disclosed by Hassler and shown in Figure 3. It is again noted that Yoon teach that the operating members may be rotated as well as angularly deflected.

To have provided the Yoon device, which discloses rotatably and angularly mounted end effectors, with a rotary knob means on the handle device to control the rotation and angular orientation of the end effectors would have been an obvious design consideration for one of ordinary skill in the art since Hassler disclose such a control means used in an analogous instrument.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Inoue (5,997,565) disclose another forceps device having a pivoting handle whereby pivoting of the handle member controls the angular orientation of the end effectors.
